

PROGRAM LEADER INTRODUCTION

Dan Frewin

Dan Frewin is a learning and development professional and accomplished facilitator who has worked with all levels of organizations creating, designing and delivering learning to support strategic objectives and culture.

In his 12 years with Loblaw Companies Ltd., Dan enjoyed his roles as manager, Learning and Development; manager, Leadership Development; and lead facilitator for Loblaw's culture change initiative, mentoring other facilitators and delivering over 150 culture change sessions to audiences of 20 to 200 people.

Dan's facilitation style is simple: he focuses on being authentic, building trust and making connections. Dan provides learners with an opportunity to have insights and see things "differently," using personal experiences, humour and storytelling to help people feel at ease, eager to contribute and connected to the content. He is passionate about facilitation, and that passion is reflected in the energy he brings to each and every session he facilitates.

Dan is a father of three headstrong boys: Jack, Josh and Joel. His only regret is naming them all with names that start with the same letter, as it can get ridiculously confusing. Dan loves Northern Ontario and is an avid fisherman (though he doesn't eat fish). His prize catch to date is a 56-inch-long muskie. He is still chasing the elusive 30-inch walleye.
