

PROGRAM LEADER INTRODUCTION

Karen B. Eisenthal

Karen Eisenthal is a Box of Crayons' master facilitator, delivering its award-winning coaching skills programs to companies across North America. Her resumé reveals the amazing path her career took as she lived and worked in several countries, developing areas of expertise in coaching, leadership and management development, cultural competence and communication.

Early in her career, Karen trained trainers for an international, anti-bias organization and led the HR function at a Manhattan-based dot.com. She has spent the last two decades coaching, facilitating and consulting individuals and groups, across multiple industries. Karen is passionate about working with clients to increase alignment between their intentions and impact, whether they're looking to increase success in difficult stakeholder relationships or in understanding how to traverse the nuances of leading a new team in another country. She provides clients with the critical tools and strategies necessary to ensure lasting behavioural change, removing roadblocks and empowering them to achieve both individual and business goals.

Although Karen holds a BA in communication and an MA in intercultural relations, and is a certified executive coach, her favourite distinctions include being an adventurer, volleyball player, animal lover and mother.
