Blair Steinbach

A cutting-edge thinker and practitioner in personal transformation and organizational development, Blair Steinbach has the rare gift of making the complex simple. Spanning three decades, his work has taken him around the globe, where he has engaged with leaders and managers in virtually every industry, from small classrooms to groups of thousands.

Throughout his journey, Blair has had a life mission of exploring one compelling question: How can I help people get out of their own way, so they can live meaningful, connected lives?

One of the great benefits of his work is the opportunity to travel to other countries, where he has experienced both cultures that challenge his assumptions with their alternative ways of living and culinary adventures that stretch his palate.

When he is home, he is in Stratford, Ontario, where he and his wife preside over family gatherings of their very own Brady Bunch.

And when he needs to get away and think, he jumps on his motorcycle and rides.
