

Marc Hildreth

Program Leader

Bio

Marc is a professional in the area of learning, development and talent management with over 25 years of experience in organizational and behavioural learning strategy, leadership development, management consulting, and skills development across diverse industries such as hospitality, media, telecom, IT, FMCG, BPO and pharmaceuticals.

With an educational background in social anthropology, Marc holds a master's degree in organizational psychology and certifications in various psychometric assessments; his core competence is in the areas of behavioural, attitudinal and skill interventions for organizations, specifically leadership and management teams. The strength he brings to his delivery and involvement in interventions is his positivity, energy, and passion. Clients describe Marc's style of delivery as highly facilitative, creating an open, appreciative environment while addressing challenges in a constructive and solution-oriented manner. His experience with blended learning methodologies of classroom training, coupled with targeted skill coaching sessions, enables true movement of the "results needle." Clients globally come back to work with Marc—a testament to his effective facilitation style.

Marc's ancestry is rooted in the former Portuguese settlement of Goa, in western India, and like most Goans, he loves his music—specifically jazz, R&B and the occasional Ibiza EDM. He's also a hard-core foodie and loves to travel. These passions tie in perfectly to his experience of working in over 35 countries around the world and with a range of management and leadership, enabling him to effectively adapt interventions to diverse audiences. He has worked and travelled extensively in ANZ, Asia, the Middle East, Europe and North America.
